Chicago, April 30.—Since modern medical science is able to make a test of the relative physical strength of two men, differing degrees of the surface measurements of a tape, the results of Dr. C. W. Piper's examination of James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson are interesting. The Chicago physician and physical culturist made an examination of Jeffries on January 1, and during the past week the negro champion was placed under a similar test by the same man.

The comparative surface measurements show some odd variations. Jeffries is the taller man, but his shoulders lack 1-8 inches of Johnson's breadth. About the chest the white man is larger than his opponent who will face him on July 4. Jeffries' chest, normal, is 41 1-2 inches. Johnson's is 42; when expanded the white man reaches 49 1-4 to Johnson's 43 1-4. Dr. Piper states that expansion means lung stretching, not muscular change, and that slight lung expansion is characteristic of the negro race. The man taper down from the shoulders to hips, which with Jeffries measure 42 1-2 and with Johnson 42 1-4. Their girth of neck is identical. Johnson's arms and wrists are larger than Jeffries', but the white man is bigger in the thighs, calves and knees.

Both Physically Perfect.
The Chicago physician states that both the pugilists are physically perfect and mighty men of tremendous strength. Furthermore, he believes that both are sound in muscle texture and vital organs. He says that neither has dissipated he has been sufficiently strong to withstand the effects of that rumors of dissipation by either fighter are unfounded.

In order to counterbalance the effects of training on the two men and the difference in time between the tests, he gave Johnson more exercise during the heart examinations. There were fifteen weeks' difference in time between the two tests.

The examination of the heart action was made in both cases with a stethoscope before and after exercise. Jeffries showed no traces of fatty degeneration of the heart or of valvular trouble. Before exercise the beat was 72 to the minute, and after moderate exercise and three minutes' rope skipping, the beat was only 92, steady and strong.

After one minute's rest the beat returned to the normal 72 mark. The quick return to the normal beat was stated by Dr. Piper to be an indication of wonderful recuperative power. Johnson had a higher normal beat. He registered 77 a minute; but as with Jeffries, there was no fluttering, no indication of weakness, and the beat came with absolute regularity. The negro was examined again after a six-round boxing bout and after he had done the gymnastic dip, three-five times on the parallel bar his heart showed no weakness, and quickly returned to the normal.

No Trace of Degeneracy.
When the physician examined the muscles of the fighters he found that Jeffries showed no indication of degeneracy. There was an encasement of fatty tissue over the working muscles, but the muscles themselves were not fat, and sprang into instant hardness under tension. Moreover, those powerful muscles are long and smooth from tendon to tendon. They slip and ripple easily under the skin without binding and undue bulkiness. The same qualities hold true for Johnson. His muscles are steel, wonderfully developed, particularly about the back and arms, snappy and elastic.

As to general health and condition, neither man showed any sign of kidney or stomach trouble. Jeffries had the more powerful lungs and more normal heart action; but the negro was not weak as to the lungs, and his heartbeat, while rapid, was powerful. The hands of both were strong and large. Neither had a broken or misplaced knuckle. The bones were firmly knit together and the whole fastened strongly to the wrist.

Johnson's feet are flat, but otherwise well-formed and strong.

NO DECISION REACHED.

Football Rules Committee Not Ready to Announce Changes in Game.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 30.—The national intercollegiate football rules committee, after wrestling all day with the forward pass and the various problems still unsolved, and instead of making public the entire list of amendments, suggested a plan to control the excesses and eliminate the dangers incident to scholastic football.

The committee came to the conclusion that most of the injuries and fatalities which occurred in football were the result of a lack of proper supervision by school faculties and games between teams not properly matched.

WESTON IN YONKERS.

Aged Pedestrian Greeted With Great Enthusiasm on His Arrival.

New York, April 30.—Edward Payson Weston, the seventy-two-year-old pedestrian, arrived in Yonkers shortly before 11 o'clock to-night, on his great walking trip.

An immense crowd had waited all evening along Warburton Avenue, in Yonkers, to welcome the aged athlete, and as he came nodding into view, after tramping sixty miles from Wappingers Falls during the day, he was greeted with continuous cheering all the way to the Getty House.

He was not so weary but that he could laugh and bow his gratitude to the throngs, and swung along at an easy stride.

Weston went to the Getty House, and almost immediately retired. He will rest until Monday morning, as he never walks on Sunday, and will enter New York Monday.
